Both to Teats 25 Mme. de St. Mart Is Accused of Teaching Her Daughter to Lie-Society Wants to Hold Child as Witness-Parents Insulted in Court.

Georgette de St. Mart, the eleven-yeareld daughter of Baron G. de St. Mart of 233 East Thirteenth street, who was held as a witness in the Gerry jail for two nights and a day and was not allowed to see or even receive a brief note from her parents. was restored to them yesterday in the Yorkrile police court after the Gerry agents had made a stiff fight to hold her prisoner for some time to come. THE SUN yesterday told a little of how the Baron and his wife tried unsuccessfully to visit their daughter in the Gerry society's rooms, but it didn't tell half of the troubles that the parents have had.

On Monday afternoon Mrs. St. Mart sent the little girl to the store of Dominick Galeano, at 191 First avenue, with a jug of claret to be exchanged. The claret wasn't of the grade that had been ordered and Georgenawas told to get a better grade of wine and pay twenty-five cents, the difference The girl went to the store, exchanged the wine and was nabbed by Agents O'Connell and O'Connor of the Gerry society, who allege that complaints have been made that Galeano has been selling liquor to your Honor." minors. "Well, will you please tell her for me that I have been here and let her know hat we haven't forgotten her?" asked

Mrs. de St. Mart in desperation. The Gerry man said he would, but he lidn't; and Georgette, ignorant of what all the trouble was about and thinking that her parents didn't know what had become of her, cried herself to sleep. She ad expected all the evening to be sent ome at any moment, because the Gerry officers told her that as soon as the claret had been tested she would be released.

FORTUNE RESTS ON POINT OF LAW Surrogate in kings Must Decide Where McClennen's $150,000 Will Go.

It all depends on what interpretation Surrogate James C. Church of Kings county Court as to whether or not the Roman Catholic hospitals and orphan asylums of Brooklyn receive $150,000, or the wife of the Yorkville police court before Magistrate E. G. Higginbotham gets the $150,000.

The complication has been brought about by the recent death of Catherine McClennen, daughter of the late Andrew McClennen, who died some years ago and left a will containing a peculiar clause, which is now coming up for interpretation before Surrogate Church.

Then she went home and told the Baron what had happened. He was mad clear through and couldn't understand how the laws of a State allowed such high handed procedure. He went to the Jefferson Market police court to see the Magistrate about it. He was told there that the case was at the Yorkville court, and up to East Fifty-seventh street he went. The court was closed when he got there, but a court coffeer who remained told him that the case was closed when he got there, but a court coffeer who remained told him that the case was closed when he got there, but a court coffeer who remained told him that the case was closed when he got there, but a court containing a peculiar clause, which is now coming up for interpretation before Surrogate Church.

Andrew McClennen, who was a well known merchant of Brooklyn, made a will in which he devised that the house at 127 Schermerhorn street, Brooklyn, and all its furnishings should be enjoyed by his wife. Bridget T. McClennen, and that on her death it should revert to a trust fund, of which "my friend Lawyer William J. Gaynor" shall be the trustee. This trust fund amounted in all to about $300,000.
